SECRET DOCUMENTS MAY BE SUBPOENAED IN CONSPIRACY CASE

Confidential Reports On Jap Relations May Be Revealed

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—The Fall-Doherty conspiracy trial settled down today to the business of hearing direct testimony from the first group of the hundred-odd nationally-known figures who, in one way or another, have knowledge of the circumstances leading up to the leasing of the Elk Hills naval reserve to Edward L. Doherty and subsequent indictment of Doherty and Albert B. Fall for conspiracy to defraud the government.

Before placing anyone on the stand, Owen J. Roberts, government counsel, read portions of the navy department's specifications for the Pearl Harbor oil storage project for the sake of the record. Much of the questioning of witnesses will center around the circumstances of the letting of this contract to the Doherty-controlled Pan-American company.

The two Pearl Harbor contracts and the Elk Hills oil lease were then placed in the record.

Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy under President Wilson, took the stand.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Highly confidential documents of a most sensational character bearing upon America's relations with Japan have been subpoenaed in the Fall-Doherty conspiracy case, it was learned today.

At the instance of Frank J. Hogan, chief counsel for Doherty, the all-magnate, Justice A. Hoehling has ordered Secretary of the Navy Wilbur to appear with every report made to the navy department by Admiral Gleaves while the latter was in Asiatic waters, in 1920-21-22.

Hogan, addressing the jury during his opening argument, stated flatly that Gleaves had reported he had reliable information that the Japanese government was preparing for a secret mobilization against Hawaii and the Philippines and that for that reason, the navy was anxious to enter into the contract with the Pan-American Oil Company, for consumption of which Doherty and ex-Secretary of the Interior Fall are facing charges of conspiracy to defraud the government.

OBERLIN STUDENTS GIVEN DISMISSALS

OBERLIN, O., Nov. 24.—Three juniors, one freshman and a first-year coed today were dismissed from Oberlin college for having passed around a hip flask at a party and others may become involved in an investigation ordered by Dean C. N. Cole.

The expulsions were ordered after the case was heard by a jury of faculty members and students. They indicated that further disciplinary action is imminent.

The students were charged with having drunk liquor at a dance November 6, in the college gymnasium.

College officials declined to make public the names of the dismissed students.

"We intend to pursue the investigation and there may be other students dismissed," declared Dean C. N. Cole. "Of course, this action does not mean that the five who were dismissed can never re-enter Oberlin. Under certain circumstances, they all will be eligible for re-enrollment."

COMMUNITY CHEST IS OVERFLOWING

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 24.—The eighth annual community chest bulges with gold here today, contributors to the fund having subscribed $4,445,506—the greatest sum ever collected for charitable causes in one campaign.

While this sum was about $150,000 short of the goal sought, it represents an increase of $15,000 over last year. As the shortage will be charged to a surplus fund, none of the charities will be curtailed.

The drive was featured by the contributions of 466,299 men, women and children, 7,352 more than donated to the fund in 1925.

The largest contribution was $130,000, subscribed by Samuel Mather. A kindergarten pupil gave one cent.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 24.—David Atkins, twenty-year-old negro, convicted of the first-degree murder of Harry A. Malone, Baltimore, and Ohio railroad detective, near Canton, must die in the electric chair on a date to be fixed later, a record at the supreme court here today showed. The court affirmed the sentence of the Stark County court.

"KING" BEN'S ACCUSERS

MRS. RUTH BAMFORD REED (LEFT) AND MRS. GLADYS RUBEL (RIGHT)

DETROIT, Nov. 24.—Tales that might have come out of a Turkish sultan's harem will be told in court when "King Benjamin" Purnell is brought to trial on charges of immorality, it is indicated by prospective witnesses.

While attorneys for Purnell are preparing with the aid of steadfast followers of the "king," to assail the testimony of Mrs. Gladys Bamford Rubel and her sister, Mrs. Ruth Bamford Reed.

They have a lurid story to tell. And they declare that their experiences were exactly like those of scores of other girls in teens.

"The king could do no wrong." That is the tenor of the account of their life in the "House of David," which was to them a house of shame.

Never Allowed Money.
Gladys and Ruth Bamford were born in the colony, their parents having come from Australia to join it. Purnell, before he crowned himself, visited Australia, preached made converts. The Bamfords turned over their small fortune to Purnell and, believing they were doing so for the glory of God, became Benjamin's puppets.

"Those who joined King Ben's colony had to give all they had to him. Money was never circulated in the colony. Only King Ben had the right to have it," the girls explain.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—Football-mad Chicago today installed West Point a decided favorite in the 29th Army-Navy gridiron battle, at Soldiers' Field here Saturday.

The betting odds are eight to five the Cadets sink the ship.

A firm of Pittsburgh brokers threw $10,000 in Navy money on marbles-labbed La Salle street, in the financial district, here this morning and it was snapped up crocodile fashion by Army backers, who gladly stood the odds.

Some money at seven to five was placed on Army and a few bets at long odds were made on West Point, largely a favorite because many of the Cadet players are former Mid-Western stars. Among these is Murrell, the big West Point fullback, who formerly dazzled at the University of Minnesota.

Navy's early-season defeat of Michigan has won the Annapolis eleven even favor but this is offset by Army's superb game against Notre Dame, Mid-West's favorite and regarded anywhere west of the Roaring Forties as America's most powerful machine.

The naval academy team will arrive here tomorrow afternoon and will go immediately to the Hotel Windmere to eat turkey. A quiet evening will follow, with a secret practice scheduled for Friday.

The Army team will reach Chicago Friday and go through a secret practice at the South Shore country club grounds.

Members of the student bodies of the two service schools will unite at a luncheon Friday, to be served at a mile-long table. More than 3,500 guests will be entertained and the menu includes 4,500 pounds of turkey.

Howard P. Savage, national commander of the American Legion, will preside at the luncheon. Vice President Dawes will be among those welcoming the rival forces to Chicago.

CLEVELAND MAN IS OUT FOR SPEAKER

MARION, O., Nov. 24.—Assured of support by Cleveland and Toledo members of the house, Attorney H. Edmund Hill is expecting to declare himself a candidate for the office of speaker of the house in the eighty-seventh General Assembly of Ohio.

Hill, a staunch Republican and close friend and admirer of President Harding, was recently elected to his third term. He has served on a number of the most important committees in the house during his two terms.

FOUR HURT IN AUTO WRECK

SPRINGFIELD PIKE RESIDENT SUFFERS SERIOUS INJURIES

Penrose Gasho and Three Children Hurt In Auto Collision

Penrose Gasho, 40, Goes Station, is in McClellan Hospital with a fractured skull and is paralyzed on the right side, and his three children are suffering painful hurts, received when the auto they occupied was struck by a large truck in front of their home on the Springfield Pike, Tuesday evening at 4:30 o'clock.

Gasho had not regained consciousness at the hospital, Wednesday morning.

The accident happened when Gasho attempted to back his machine out of the driveway beside his home, onto the pike. It is believed he saw the heavy truck bearing down on him but too late to avoid the collision.

Mrs. Gasho was inside her home at the time of the wreck and assisted in extricating her husband and children from the wreckage of the car. The Gashos were occupying a small touring car and the truck, belonging to the Hauck Hardware Co., Springfield was headed for Springfield. The name of the driver could not be learned, since there were no actual witnesses to the accident and in the excitement his name was not obtained.

The Gasho machine was totally demolished. The heavy truck was thrown into the ditch, but damaged only slightly. Its driver was not hurt.

Gasho was rushed to the hospital and his three children, Marie, sixteen years; Glen, ten years and Roger, eight years, were given first-aid treatment at their home. An X-ray was taken Wednesday to determine the extent of Gasho's injuries.

Gasho is employed at the Southwestern Portland Cement Co., Osborn. The accident was where Cecil Caldwell, his wife and stepson were killed when their auto was hit by an Interurban car a year and one-half ago.

SENTENCE VETERAN TO LIFE IN PEN

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 24.—William Harvey Elam, shell-shocked war veteran of Meridian, Miss., today was making preparations to go to the Ohio state penitentiary, there to spend the remainder of his life, without hope of parole or pardon.

A jury of eight men and four women found Elam guilty of first degree murder and recommended mercy.

The ex-soldier shot and killed his sweetheart, Helen Miklos, in a fit of jealous rage when she started to take an automobile ride with a deputy sheriff. Elam's aged mother, here from Meridian for the trial, lank down her face when they saved the youth from the electric chair by the mercy recommendation.

The revelations, which are of itemized, documentary character, assume special importance in view of the new drive for Lowden-McNary-Haugen legislation, launched by the 12-state corn-belt and cotton-belt conference at St. Louis. Even the action of the national congress by the enactment of "McNary-Haugenism" would seem to lack support among dirt farmers judging by the Farm Journal's straw-vote figures.

Returns from farm states east, west, north and south show 9,811 votes for the McNary-Haugen scheme, and 15,005 votes against it. To date fourteen states have been tabulated. The figures contain many surprises. Wisconsin, for instance, supposedly a strong-to date, and more than 100 have testified.

"Willie" is no funny man on the stand. Nothing at all peculiar about him except, perhaps, his looks. When he opens his mouth, to use elegant English, he "says something."

"Absolutely not," "I recollect nothing concerning that, sir," and "positively not," were just a few of the replies that "Willie" made to the bustling little prosecutor, Alexander Simpson, who seemed to realize he had struck a tartar in "Willie." He even corrected Simpson. It is "The Rev. Mr. Hall," not "Dr. Hall," Willie told him.

In a calm, self-possessed manner, he related that he had supper that evening with the Rev. Dr. Hall, Mrs. Hall and Mrs. Hall's little niece,

Queen Marie Sails To Join Spouse After Hectic Tour Here Is Cut Short

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—Marie, Queen of Roumania, sailed for home today, her American tour cut short by the illness of King Ferdinand.

Standing on the deck of the liner Berengaria, which was to leave at 10 o'clock, her majesty gazed wistfully this morning at New York's towering skyscrapers and caught a final glimpse of New York's millions on their way to work.

After a final hectic day in New York, characteristic in its bustling activity of the five-week American trip, the Queen boarded the liner shortly before midnight last night and retired immediately to the palatial suite made gorgeous by flowers and gifts. Prince Nicholas and Princess Ileana attended a revue and reached the ship nearly an hour later.

Broadcasting a farewell message for America from radio station WMCA, Queen Marie refuted the insinuation that she had come to this country to collect money for Roumania. She said:

"When I am gone, don't let anything tarnish that remembrance that you have of me. Don't let anything come into your mind that perhaps I was across here for anything else but what I said I had come for. That was to know you all, to tell you my gratitude for all America had done for Roumania in the time of the war and after the war, when we were poor and destroyed."

"I did not come on business. I did not come for the sake of politics. I came for nothing but just to make friends with you; to carry that friendship back with me into my country and to tell them that America will be kind to Roumania and will remember Roumania. If ever a moment comes, America will understand what Roumania is and that Roumania has also her right to a place in the sun."

Regretting that her itinerary had to be curtailed, she said:

"To all those who are disappointed because I could not come to them, I send a last and loving greeting and I beg them not to think unkindly of me because I did not come."

Still Favors "Bob"

"Bob" may be going out of style in colleges, but not in movieland. Boyish cut like that worn by Patsy Ruth Miller is the thing in Hollywood at the moment.

ATTEMPTED PANAMA FLIGHT MORE THAN HALF WAY FINISHED

Planes Pass Isle of Pines
Wednesday Morning
Early

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—The navy's nonstop flight to Panama being attempted by two all-metal PN-10 planes was more than half completed this morning and the ships were traveling smoothly toward the goal at an average speed of seventy-two and five-tenths miles an hour, according to a message to the navy department.

A message was intercepted from plane No. 1, piloted by Lieutenant E. J. Connelley, while flying over the Isle of Pines, which gave his position as latitude 21° 28', longitude 81° 26'. The Isle of Pines was passed at 6:35 a. m., with the second plane, piloted by Commander Bartlett, a short distance behind.

The Isle of Pines is 1,029 nautical miles from Hampton Roads. Connelley reported that he was making eighty-three knots an hour over the Pines.

Both planes carry heavy loads of fuel. They left Hampton Roads with 1,500 gallons each and food aboard for thirty hours. The expected time of flight is about twenty-four hours.

Warships are stationed at various points in the Caribbean prepared to pick up the flyers, should they be forced down in open water.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Cost of the projected improvements of the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence waterways channels, including installation of 5,000,000 horsepower hydroelectric developments, will amount to from $620,000,000 to $850,000,000, according to the report of the United States-Canada joint board of engineers made public today.

Immediate work proposed would cost from $394,000,000 to $423,600,000 and would require from eight to twelve years for completion.

The plan contemplates deepening of the main channels in the Great Lakes and the building of a ship canal from the lakes to the sea through the St. Lawrence.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—The Rota Tribunal here today stated that it has received no notification from Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt II that she will seek an annulment of her marriage. Officials of the Rota denied reports circulated in the United States that an annulment had been granted Mrs. Vanderbilt.

hold of sentiment in favor of government sale of surplus crops abroad, voted 477 to 202 against the plan, Indiana, whose two Republican senators, Watson and Robinson, were ardent McNary-Haugenites, voted 1,601 to 252 in opposition. Missouri, where William Hirth and his "Missouri Farm club" are powerful McNary-Haugen advocates, declared against the proposition by 408 to 287. The straw-poll, as thus far compiled on the McNary-Haugen question, is as follows:

| | For | Against |
|--------------|-----|---------|
| Minnesota | 617 | 185 |
| California | 277 | 480 |
| Iowa | 755 | 350 |
| Indiana | 252 | 1,601 |

HOSTILE TO TARIFF CUT

On the question of lowering the tariff on manufactured goods, even if agricultural tariffs were also to come down, the ballot shows an even greater hostility. The vote found 16,814 farmers opposed to the particular scheme for bettering their conditions and only 7,592 in its favor. Iowa, citadel of the corn belt, voted against tariff reduction by 662 to 426; Wisconsin was opposed by 574 to 108. The big eastern industrial states naturally registered the heaviest vote against revising the tariff downward. Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York and Michigan leading in that direction. Illinois, Indiana, Nebraska, Minnesota and Texas seem to want tariff reduction in farmers' interest.

"For the present," comments the Journal on its straw-vote, "there is no conclusion to be drawn but that farmers are opposed to both McNary-Haugenism and tariff reduction as means of changing their economic position by law. The active politicians, and even more professional 'farm leaders,' who are harping on these two themes, may well stop, look and listen." The publication points out that it deliberately refrained from "the familiar and unreliable" method of taking its straw-vote by mail. It resorted instead to the house-to-house system of personal interviews by its own representatives on rural free delivery routes throughout the country. Several hundred men were engaged in the work. The poll is still in progress. But the editors of the Farm Journal, which has the largest clientele of any agricultural organ in the United States, seem convinced that the results already indicated will not be substantially altered by later figures.

CAPPER TELLS PROSPECTS

Meantime, there is every sign that the eternal issue of "farm relief" will again dominate the political situation at Washington. Action of the 12-state corn and cotton group and the plan of the national grange for an "export duty bounty law" make that certain. So important a farm leader in congress as Senator Arthur Capper, Republican, of Kansas, has just issued an autographed statement which is a portent of coming developments. Mr. Capper says:

"The president is not as strong in the agricultural west as he might be. Still there is no great ill-feeling against him. The west has always been with him in his crusade for economy. Many farmers think the president has not done for the farming industry what he might well do and what so urgently needs doing and will have to be done. But the November elections in the middle west or southwest can hardly be construed as a protest against the administrations. The defeats in Missouri and Oklahoma were due to local causes; in Missouri, to the liquor question; in Oklahoma, to factional differences among Republicans. "And yet the plain fact is that the salvation of the Coolidge administration and its best hope depend absolutely on the agricultural west; on the working out of a 'farm relief' program which shall be acceptable to this large group of producing states. "The condition of the farmers is not improving. For the last three months all reports of the department of agriculture have shown the buying power of the farmer's dollar to be less than a year ago, and have shown farm prices on the decline. "The farm problem exists. It is tremendously real. And it is a national problem; for American prosperity cannot be maintained without a well-to-do farming industry. Something has been done toward relieving it, but the situation of the industry is more acute than ever. "This is the problem of the Coolidge administration. If the administration can meet the emergency the country will rise and call it blessed. But this will be the test."

GET RID OF YOUR FAT

Thousands of others have gotten rid of theirs by my simple and efficient method of fat reduction without starvation diet or burdensome exercise, often at a very rapid rate and WITHOUT PAYMENT until reduction has taken place.

I am a licensed practicing physician and have made a careful study of the physiological requirements of the human body. This has enabled me to select such ingredients and in such proportion as in my opinion will produce not only a loss of weight without harm and an improvement in health, but with it an alleviation of all of the troublesome symptoms which frequently accompany and often are a direct result of overweightness, such as shortness of breath on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, etc., not to speak of the relief from the embarrassment of being too stout. Stout persons suffering from such diseases as Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Eczema, Asthma and high blood pressure are greatly relieved by a reduction of their superfluous fat.

My treatment will relieve that depressed, tired, sleepy feeling, giving you the renewed energy and vigor which come as a result of the loss of superfluous fat. If you are overstout do not postpone but sit down right now and send for my FREE TRIAL TREATMENT and my plan whereby I am to be PAID ONLY AFTER REDUCTION HAS TAKEN PLACE if you so desire.

THE MAIN CHANCE TODAY'S

The main chance is today's chance. The wrecks along life's highway testify to that simple truth. It is right and good to look ahead, but the man who sees farthest is the man who keeps his eyes on his job. It is splendid to have the urge to climb high. But the man who gets there is he who never takes his gaze from the finger holds in the sheer rock wall of his hard ascent.

Pitiful it is to see the broken hulk of a man lying at the base of life's mountain side and to know that he fell from high when success had turned his head.

Every day, in every field, we see these wrecks. And they point a moral that no man dare disregard. Life's work is, indeed, a climb and few and far between are the plateau lands upon which the breath-spent toiler may seek refreshment.

How many are the men, in private business or public concerns, who, flushed with the zeal for great attainment, despise the smaller tasks which lead them to the goal. How often a man who uses a public office to gain a higher honor, awakes to the rude actuality that he has been weighed and found wanting in his simple trust.

The key to great opportunity lies in proving true in the obscure, humble tasks of the present moment. The man who keeps ever in mind that his present job is his main job, that the present chance is the main chance, builds slowly, but surely, to broader trusts and greater achievements.

The builder knows that the higher he would rear his structure toward the heavens, the deeper and broader and stronger must be his foundation. The digging may be dull and tedious business, but without it there can be no lofty tower to challenge the eternal stars.

NEEDLES AND PINS

Winter is here; you need a warm coat. In the big cities, you huddle over steam pipes, shivering. Man alone of all nature's creatures, must look after himself. Other animals, as the seasons change, are generously provided with changes of clothing, to protect them from the frost, snow, ice, heat, wind; but man must make his own covering, or die miserably.

Without the tailor, no Civilization, in our modern sense at least. Needles and pins are wonderful things.

Man, by nature soft and weak, is the most helpless of all other animals on this earth. The child sits up at the sixth month, creeps by the tenth month, walks by the fifteenth month, but has to be watched and tended by its parents for many years. If left unprotected with clothing or food, the hardest child in America could not survive one cold winter's night. What applies to the child is also true of the grown man and woman.

Without needle and thread, our race would immediately have to migrate to the jungles in tropical Asia, our ancestral home, otherwise we would die of cold and exposure.

As long as our primitive ancestors were content to remain in their Garden of Eden, all was well, but the urge to travel afar, to see the world, brought trouble, and that trouble is with us still.

At first, man did not dare to range very far, but kept close to the rivers. He was a fisherman long before he was a hunter, or a keeper of flocks and herds.

It was then too late to return to the Valley of Eden, and man, thanks to tailors, needle and thread no longer had fear of perishing from frost or snow, heat or furious sandstorms.

Imitating freely according to his needs the clothing of the lion, the fish, the eagle, the bee, the ant, the butterfly, the goat, the silkworm, robbing each, man found it possible to live at the remotest regions of this globe, and be at home everywhere. Today, in heavy furs in the Arctic, he makes a precarious livelihood spearing fish, works in the coal mines of Pennsylvania, fires the furnaces in the ship, accommodates his life, through his clothing, to the experiences of a sewer-rat in Chicago, a gold-hunter in Peru, or a farmer in Kansas.

And on account of needles and pine.

How to Achieve Beauty

FIVE AGES OF BEAUTY

The Debutante Skin

In speaking of the debutante skin, I mean the young skin that does not need the corrective measures of the more active preparations.

The preventive measures are sufficient. In other words, the treatment need only be of the simplest kind.

I have spoken of acne, which is the chief enemy of the young complexion. With that disposed of, we have today only the healthy normal skin to consider which of fers the easiest problems both for its possessor and for the beauty specialists.

There are only three things necessary for this type of skin. Fundamentally speaking, they are what I call the three steps to beauty, and are as follows: The first step is to cleanse and nourish the skin; the second step is to awaken the skin's activity, and the third step is to tone and brace the tissues.

The cleansing should be a well-known Matron's Skin.

balanced combination of a well-chosen bland soap and a good nourishing and cleansing cream.

The skin's activity should be awakened by the use of an active cream that encourages the circulation of the blood and enables the pores to throw off all waste matter and impurities.

The active cream acts on the skin very much like a physic works on the bowels. The toning and bracing of the tissues is done by the application of a soothing lotion that has bracing and protective qualities, and gives an excellent finish to the skin before applying cosmetics.

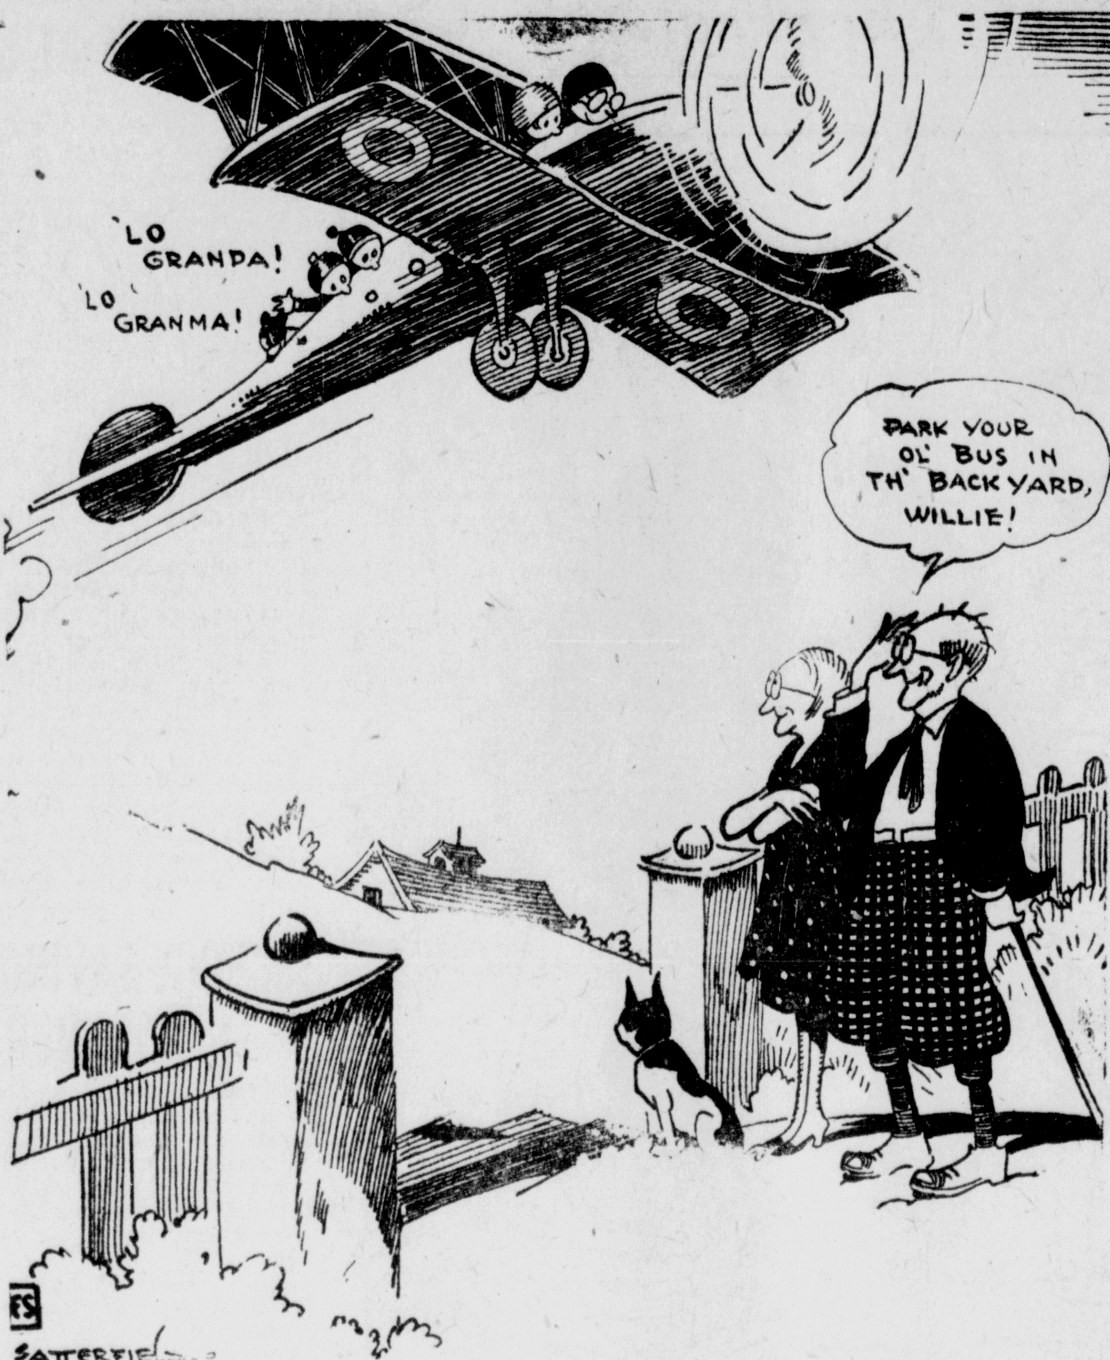

It is really a joy to work upon the debutante skin, which is the skin in the pink of perfection. However, although the daily beauty treatment can be as simple as I have stated above, still it is essential that it is not neglected.

During the twenties you are laying the foundation for the quality of skin you will possess when you enter the thirties.

The debutante skin can also affect a more brilliant style of makeup than any natural effect if powder, rouge and lipstick are properly applied.

My next subject will be "The Young Matron's Skin."

KELLYGRAMS by FRED C KELLY

DO WE REALLY LIKE TO BE FOOLED?

Houdini's recent death, in consequence of a blow in the abdomen by a smart-aleck whom he had invited to the stage, brings to mind the question whether people go to magic entertainments because they like to be fooled or because they hope they will be clever enough to see through most of the tricks.

I have wondered about this for a long time because I have dabbled a little at magic since childhood. My impression is that it takes a clever performer to put his audience into such good humor that they will enjoy the show even though they are fooled. Despite my fondness for sleight-of-hand stuff I have never outgrown a natural chumminess in doing such tricks and people usually detect my secrets right off. At such times, the little group of friends who comprise my audience seem much happier than on the rare occasions when I do succeed in fooling them.

While the man who hit Houdini, as a test for the strength of his stomach muscles, of course didn't intend to bring on the magician's death, yet my guess is that he hit him harder than he realized because he was unconsciously indignant over the way he had already been baffled by Houdini's tricks.

I recall a woman who volunteered explanations of a simple bit of sleight-of-hand, and on being shown that she was wrong, exclaimed: "Well, you can't fool me. There's some kind of a trick to it!"

It's natural that people should be secretly annoyed when they're fooled and happy when they have outsmarted the performer. Nobody cares to pay money to be made to feel inferior. But what reconciles the audience to being mystified at a magician's show is probably the fact that is clever enough to give them opportunity to laugh at somebody else. He frequently cracks jokes at the expense of individuals. And he is almost sure to ask a few members of the audience to step to the stage.

In what follows, though this committee has the advantage of being close to the performer, they are nevertheless completely dumbfounded. The rest of the audience can then sit back and laugh at them.

With Houdini gone, few magicians are left clever enough to give a whole evening's entertainment and at the same time prevent an audience from becoming half-mad at him for outwitting them.

If they enjoy a magic show it is in spite of being fooled.

Keeping HEALTHY by Dr. A.F. Currier

WHEN PERSONS CAN'T TALK

Anybody who has seen a person struggling to express his wishes or his thoughts in words which do not come to him or which he cannot articulate, can realize the importance of speech and the misery of him who has lost control over it.

I do not mean the condition which comes from fear, or other emotion, a stage fright, for instance, which is quickly recovered from as the senses are gathered together again, but that which comes as the result of disease or injury.

Aphasia means disturbance of an injurious character in the anterior portion of the left half of the brain, or in the arteries which supply that portion of the brain, which either impairs the power of speech or abolishes it altogether.

It may mean loss of the power of language, but with some of the preservation of memory or the loss of both. In the first place the power of articulation is lost or perverted, in the second the memory of words is lost or perverted. In either case speech is slow and more or less inarticulate, ideas are incoherent, and there is more or less inability to express thought by speech, gesture or writing.

There is loss of memory for words, loss of power to express ideas by written signs or by gestures, loss of the proper use of the language.

Aphasia as thus defined from the imperfect speech or speechlessness of deaf mutes, of those who have difficulty or disease with the muscles of the throat and mouth or with the larynx, or with the incoherent speech of idiots and imbeciles.

In aphasia which is due to disease of the brain, there is suspension of speech, misuse or forgetfulness of words, loss of memory of suitable words, and a very limited vocabulary, limited perhaps to half a dozen or a dozen words. Such words as are used are mispronounced or badly articulated, words and thoughts cannot be co-ordinated. At the same time the mind may be normal or even keen for business, amusements and other things requiring mental activity. A single word by one who is aphasic may indicate an attempt to express an entire sentence. He may repeat it over and over and get very angry because you do not comprehend what he desires to tell you.

In one form of this condition the patient can write fairly well, especially if he is aided or prompted by suggestions, in another the writing is scrawly and unintelligible and in another the control of both writing and speech is almost or quite abolished.

Aphasia may be transient and recovered from as the pressure upon the brain which may be the cause of the trouble is relieved, or it may be progressive and permanent, ending in insanity and death.

It may be the result of anemia, rheumatism, hemorrhage from various sources, but especially hemorrhage into the brain, syphilis, inflammation or softening of the brain, diabetes, Bright's disease, fevers of many varieties, etc.

It may come to old or young, male or female, with or without paralysis, and if the paralysis improves the aphasia may improve also. Improvement in children and young people is not unusual, in the aged improvement and recovery seldom occur.

It is most frequently caused by injuries and diseases of the brain and whenever the brain is seriously diseased recovery does not occur. Recovery with ordinary use of language may take place spontaneously or after a longer or shorter course of instruction in the use of words. One frequently has to begin at the beginning like a child.

With the aphasia there may also be other intellectual troubles and weaknesses or as already stated, the mind may be unusually acute in certain directions. In the bad cases there may be gradual development of hallucinations, delirium, melancholia and other forms of insanity with all their accompanying manifestations.

Ask Dr. Currier that medical question that has been puzzling you. Confine your letter to fifty words and send stamped, addressed envelope for reply. He cannot of course, make individual diagnoses and he reserves the right to decide as to the propriety of queries.

MAKING MODERN MENUS

A nice variation for the main dish of a small home luncheon is the asparagus loaf. Fortunately the ingredients required are almost always kept on hand by the best housekeepers and consequently this is one of those dishes which may be gotten up on short notice.

ASPARAGUS LOAF

Put enough nut meats to fill a cup through the food chopper, slightly moisten a portion of a stale loaf of bread and with a fork remove the crumbs, mixing the two ingredients together. Then add one-half teaspoon of salt, a pinch of white pepper, one cupful of shredded asparagus tips, two tablespoons of melted butter, and sufficient cream to moisten. Form into a compact loaf, and after laying in a buttered baking dish bake for fifty minutes in a moderate oven. Baste occasionally with butter, serve warm with cream sauce or cold with mayonnaise.

A change from the regulation creamed codfish is codfish in tomato sauce which is recommended for those who do not care for things which are creamed.

CODFISH IN TOMATO SAUCE

Cover one pound of salt codfish with boiling water, cook until tender, drain and separate into pieces. Combine one quart of stewed tomatoes, two medium sized onions, sliced fine and browned, two whole cloves and celery stalk. Cook ten minutes and strain. Melt two tablespoons of butter, add two tablespoons of flour, stirring constantly. Cook until it bubbles, add tomatoes, cook until smooth, add one-half teaspoon of salt and one-fourth teaspoon of pepper. Add codfish and serve on hot toast.

HUMAN NATURE On the half shell

BY JOSEPH VAN RAALTE © EFS

USELESS INFORMATION

Some day the identity of the fiend in human form who perpetrated the first questionnaire is going to be disclosed. When his name becomes known in will immediately be chalked up in red on the walls of the Hall of Infamy a foot or two above that of the inventor of the derby hat, the man who first sold a tooth brush with loose bristles, the chap who served the initial dish of mashed potatoes with lumps in them, and the varlet who wished the paper napkin on the human race.

If the stage manager of the Spanish Inquisition had known about the questionnaire he would have laughed a merry, rippling laugh, tossed the rack and thumb screw out into the back yard and produced a de luxe show.

There's a certain type of mind that refined torture, of the questionnaire sort, just naturally appeals to.

The editor of a certain New York newspaper, interviewing applicants for reportorial jobs on his sheet, coaxes them into a rehearsal of their talents and book "farnin'." And when they think the job is clinched he drags from his drawer a 25-word questionnaire and asks them to fill it out.

The questionnaire comprises simple little queries. Who is Pilsudski? Is there an I or a Y on the end of it? What's his first name? Give the Peggy Joyce's second husband's maiden name? Which way do the pits of an apple point—toward the stem or the fuzzy little thing at the other end?

Who wrote "Little Annie Rooney"? Did the Queen of Roumania get what she came for, and if so, how much? Why are Queen Mary's hats? Does Sherwood Anderson get paid for his stuff and if so, why?—and a lot of foolish questions on that order.

Despite old Tom Edison's efforts to keep the questionnaire in full bloom, it's been moulting lately and taking on a melancholy droop. All signs pointed to its early demise and general joy prevailed.

And now along comes a special writer in a Sunday newspaper telling the questionnaire a job in the arm and gradually coaxing it back to its old time vigor.

Gregory Hartwick is the lad's name and his questionnaire comprises one single, lonesome piebald query:

Name the Twelve Apostles.

Gregory says that in a somewhat extended investigation he has not yet met anyone who could name the twelve. Only three persons succeeded in hitting six or the first trial.

"Nine out of ten," says the Wor thy Brother, "start glibly by reciting the four evangelists, which gave me the bulge right there."

Peter, it seems, is almost invariably remembered, but few name Judas. Paul is almost invariably lugged in. It is on Paul as on Mark and Luke that the questionnaire depends for its success.

Questionnaire is never a success if it can be readily answered by the average, normal, intelligent human being.

It's a nice thing, of course, to know the names of the Twelve Apostles; but in an age that attempts to maintain society or pagan principles, while individual uals within that society live or Christian principles, it's more profitable to be able to name the members of board of directors in the First National Bank in the old home town.

Little Old New York

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright 1926
NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—A century and a quarter ago the Capital of the Commonwealth was a much simpler city than it is today; but even then, as now, it had its adverse critics.

Back in 1801 an unidentified visitor from Philadelphia took a jaunt around New York and upon reaching his inn at nightfall, sat down and to a friend back in Quaker Town penned a laudacious description of the old burg.

"The cost of living is too high," he wrote. "The people are not sociable enough. Dutch taste is in evidence. There are no genteel taverns as in Philadelphia, and the backyards are too small."

The markets were rotten and so far as "excursions on land" were concerned, the least said the better.

His letter, buried in a volume of the "Manuals of the Corporation of the City of New York," contains the following tag line:

"New York is a fine city to visit; but I would not live in it for anything."

It's too bad the writer's name was not preserved along with his funny old screed. As the author of that one alone, he most certainly would have achieved the Hall of Fame.

Back in that distant day a man named Bill Dunlap ran a playhouse that he called The Theater. Bill was a good American, jealous of the stage and its traditions.

On the evening of November 16, 1801, The Theater opened its doors for the season announcing the event in the public prints, in part, as follows:

"The public is respectfully requested The Theater will open for the coming season this evening with a celebrated comedy, called LOVERS VOWS. To which will be added, as Farce called FORTUNE'S FROLIC

"The doors will be open at half past five, and the curtain will rise at half after six o'clock.

"Box, one dollar. Pit, three fourths. Gallery, one-half dollar."

"It is earnestly requested that no person will carry a lighted Segar into any part of The Theater, or attempt to renew the dangerous practice of smokin either in the lobbies or in the presence of the audience."

"The hitherto unavailing requests addressed to the playbills, that this practice may be omitted, furnish a constant source of ridicule to European travelers and are liberally adduced in their publications as a proof of the limited progress of civilization in our country."

Then follow some requests from Bill, to his prospective patrons, prompt, by considerations of morality and decency. His last paragraph follows:

"He requests also the co-operation of the public in abolishing the custom of giving away or disposing of checks at the door of The Theater."

"It tends to encourage a crowd of idle boys and other disorderly persons about the avenues of The Theater, to the great annoyance of the audience by their clamorous importunity—and to the corruption of their own morals, by inducing them to loiter away whole evenings at the doors."

"Very improper company has also, sometimes, been admitted. A person who quits the house before the entertainment is concluded does so at risk of his return being prevented, unless he can identify himself to the doorman."

May the pink cloud on which old Bill Dunlap is drifting for forty-fourth street and Broadway, where William may get a squirt at what is going on in the streets down below, these nights.

He'd topple off his celestial perch sure as shootin'.

Five Home Games On Central 1927 Grid Schedule

WITHROW HIGH WILL PLAY HERE; RETURN PIQUA TO SCHEDULE

Stiff Opposition To Greet Local Team Next Season

Announcement of the list of games arranged for Central High School's football eleven in 1927 indicates two deviations from the schedule played this fall.

Eight games have been tentatively arranged, according to Coach Victor Kolb. On the customary eight-game schedule there are five attractive home games and three on foreign gridirons.

Chief among the changes is the re-appearance of Piqua on next year's chart. Urbana will also be played providing the school does not bring about another misunderstanding whereby two games are scheduled for one date, an occurrence which disrupted one Central basketball schedule and the football schedule this fall.

Games booked for next season are considered the strongest in history as close inspection fails to detect anything that may be termed a "set up."

Central opens before a home crowd September 30 with Washington C. H. and will wind up as usual with the probable and customary unfavorable weather conditions, with Wilmington appearing here November 18.

Withrow High, of Cincinnati, will also come to Xenia for a return game under a two-year home-and-home contract. These three games added to home games with Greenville and Springfield will provide Xenia fans with the chance to witness some attractive contests.

Dates for the eight games arranged and schools to be played, as announced by Coach Kolb, are as follows:

September 30—Washington C. H. here.
October 7—Greenville here.
October 14—Piqua away.
October 21—Urbana away.
October 28—Withrow (Cincinnati) here.
November 4—Springfield here.
November 12—Troy there.
November 18—Wilmington here.

Simple, but Oh My! How Vecto does heat!

You'll find the great secret of VECTO'S operating principle under its handsome porcelain enamel jacket. The air is "rubbed" against a mass of ribs or fins; and as it expands and rises it is thus made to carry off every particle of heat, "faster than bread sops up gravy."

Ordinary heaters of same size must be driven to 750 degrees of red-hot heat to equal the volume of low, gentle warmth poured out by the VECTO. "MAKE 'EM TRAVEL"

A lot of people who travel abroad third class have a first class time. There is so much travel to Europe that there's no room in the Atlantic for fish, they're lying flat in the bottom. It's got so that all the poor fish are on land anyway. But speaking about eats, the gang plank is the last board that a great many care anything about.

It's a good idea to see America first because you can't see anything after Paris, anyway.

The leisure class in this country where settling was the only thing you could do. Now when you go to California you know that the gold rush is still on even if your coat is torn off.

When anyone went to Europe in the days of red carpets on the porch steps it was a great event. On return the lucky couple gave lectures on Paris with illustrated slides, although the best slides in Paris have never been illustrated. Its only lately that much has been made of the fact that most of the

PARIS BABY GETS HER CERTIFIED CHECK

Doesn't consist of men who have retired but of their children who never get up! They may get a kick out of life as well. If mother complains about their late hours at home they take their late hours for Paris and father doesn't dare "dock" them. They look at life through portholes and binoculars. When they get across they do their sightseeing through wine glasses.

The great American public is shining up its French and its diamonds for the winter travel. Traveling used to be a thing which only a few went in for, now there aren't enough drawing rooms to go around. The idea of a big winter used to be taking your lunch and settling in a little town in Florida

Paris babies have been brought up on certified checks!

It's getting to be a kind of disgrace to spend the winter in a place where your bills won't have to be forwarded. People have gone mad on traveling, and the first three times across the ocean it's the hardest to get back.

A lot of Americans are discovering that the time to have your fling is before you get lumbago.

The more you travel the happier you are to get home, provided some one else hasn't got it in your absence! Among the things that they bring back, their new ideas are the only ones they can get through the customs. The winter travel is on, the elastic is off the checkbook, it looks like a hardboiled winter.

"Hollywood is a gorgeous preposterous. It can't exist and yet here it is. Everyone here is purely objective. They don't believe anything because somebody says it's true. They don't take any textbook's word for a darn thing. They want to find out about everything for themselves. It's amazing, magnificent. They're so alive." This is Jack Barrymore's opinion of the "movie city" which he has grown to love after declaring his one love was for the stage.

"People in Hollywood live in a different world. They live a hundred per cent more fully than other people I've ever met. I've been subjective all my life. At last, in Hollywood, I've become objective."

"The people here are all lovable, irresistible, because they've got courage," Barrymore declares. "They live. They take the good and the bad with a grin. They've created a philosophy of today. 'Try anything once.' And 'They can't kill you if you've got a sense of humor.' That's Hollywood. I've lived about a bit, met a few people, but the most interesting people in the world are in Hollywood."

HONEY LOU by Beatrice Burton

CHAPTER XXI.

On Monday morning before seven o'clock the telephone bell peeped through the flat.

"It's Mr. Wallack for you," Mrs. Huntley called to Honey Lou, who was taking her icy plunge in the chilly bathroom.

"Ask him to give you the message," Honey Lou answered through teeth that chattered, "I'm in the t-t-tub!"

But in a minute her mother came back to the door of the bathroom.

"Dear, you'd better come. He won't give the message to me," she said. "He seems to be in quite a rage—at least he sounds that way."

So Honey Lou wrapped her flannel kimono around her damp body and ran to the telephone. Her feet were bare, and the little curls that bobbed around her ears were dark and wet. She was still shivering.

"Y-yes, Mr. Wallack. This is Honey Lou."

She could hear him grunt at the other end of the line.

"I want you to go down to my office before you come to my house this morning," he told her gruffly. "Get my mail from that French doll down there, and bring it to me here."

Grumpy always called Ann "that French doll," or "that female talking machine."

Ann had never looked more like an over-dressed doll than she did on that Monday morning when Honey Lou walked into the office of the mills.

She had on a dress of black shadow lace with a belt of green ribbon.

Another band of the ribbon was tied around her bright red hair, and she wore seven or eight strings of imitations pearls with rhinestone clasps.

Her round green eyes seemed to become more round and green when she saw Honey Lou come up the iron stairs and walk across the floor to her.

"Well, for the love of Moses in the bullrushes! What are you doing here?" she wanted to know. She clapped her handkerchief to her mouth, and secretly spat her chewing gum into it.

"I came down for Mr. Wallack's mail," Honey Lou answered. "It's awfully nice to see you again, Ann. I've missed you this summer."

She smiled ravishingly—she liked Ann in spite of her immodest clothes, her chewing gum, and her "gimme" ways with men who were in love with her.

But there was no answering smile on Ann's highly rouged face. Instead her eyes hardened until they were like green stones, and a sneer curled her red lips.

"So that's it," she said, "you're the doll-baby who beat me out of the only good job I ever had in my life—I wondered what had happened when the Old Man told me

I wasn't to work for him any more. Now I know. You took my job away from me—"

"I did NOT!" Honey Lou denied it hotly. "I wouldn't take any girl's job away from her! Jack Wallack came to the hospital where I was working and begged me to take my job back! He said his father was going to send you back here, anyway, because you didn't get along with him." She was so amazed by Ann's outburst that she stammered as she spoke. "This from Ann! From Ann, who had been one of her best friends!"

"You don't suppose I believe you do you?" Ann sneered. "If you want to hear what I think about you, in plain United States, I'll tell you! I think you're lying like a rug! That's what I think!"

Honey Lou made up her mind that she would not quarrel with Ann, no matter what she said. "Oh, what has all this to do with the price of popcorn?" she asked impatiently. "Give me Grumpy's letters, and let's not talk any more!"

She heard someone come up the iron stairs and open the door of the office he found her.

"The girls will hear us," she went on very quietly, "and there's no use giving them a lot of scandal to spread."

Ann tossed her vivid red head. "You can't shut me up!" she retorted. "What do I care what they say? They know that you stand in with all the men around here because you vamp them!—Don't fool yourself that I didn't see the world had seen Joe Meadows give her that brutal, bruising kiss, weeks before, on the narrow dark staircase behind the shipping room!"

Her words took Honey Lou's breath away. She could only gasp and stare. She had never dreamed for an instant that anyone in the world had seen Joe Meadows give her that brutal, bruising kiss, weeks before, on the narrow dark staircase behind the shipping room!

"Well!" she said at last. "Well!" She turned. She made up her mind that she would say nothing more to Ann. She would simply do what she ought to have done in the first place—go into Grumpy's office and take the letters!

The door with the word "Private" painted on it in large black letters stood ajar. And the second Honey Lou stepped into Grumpy's office, she knew who had come up the stairs a few moments before.

Jack Wallack, in his blue denim overalls, was sitting at his father's desk, reading a letter.

He did not look up when she came in.

He said shortly: "I get my mail here, too." Then he shoved his father's letters across the mahogany surface of the desk, toward her.

Honey Lou knew in a flash that he had heard every word that Ann

"DON'T PAY ANY ATTENTION TO WOMEN," SAID THE OLD MAN.

What had Grumpy heard about Jack and Honey Lou? And who told it to him? Read the answer in tomorrow's chapter of HONEY LOU.

FARMERS OPPOSED TO McNARY-HAUGEN RELIEF PROPOSALS

hold of sentiment in favor of government sale of surplus crops abroad, voted 477 to 202 against the plan. Indiana, whose two Republican senators, Watson and Robinson, were ardent McNary-Haugenites, voted 1,601 to 252 in opposition. Missouri, where William Hirth and his "Missouri Farm Club" are powerful McNary-Haugen advocates, declared against the proposition by 408 to 267. The straw-poll as thus far compiled on the McNary-Haugen question, is as follows:

| | For | Against |
|--------------|-----|---------|
| Minnesota | 617 | 185 |
| California | 277 | 480 |
| Iowa | 755 | 350 |
| Indiana | 252 | 1,601 |
| Texas | 354 | 232 |
| North Dakota | 441 | 69 |
| Wisconsin | 202 | 477 |
| Missouri | 287 | 408 |
| Nebraska | 221 | 784 |
| Illinois | 318 | 180 |
| Michigan | 758 | 1,495 |
| Ohio | 287 | 1,374 |
| Pennsylvania | 761 | 2,217 |
| New York | 802 | 952 |

HOSTILE TO TARIFF CUT
On the question of lowering the tariff on manufactured goods, even if agricultural tariffs were also to come down, the ballot shows an even greater hostility. The vote found 16,814 farmers opposed to the particular scheme for bettering their conditions and only 7,592 in its favor. Iowa, citadel of the corn belt, voted against tariff reduction by 662 to 428; Wisconsin was opposed by 574 to 108. The big eastern industrial states naturally registered the heaviest vote against revising the tariff downward. Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York and Michigan leading in that direction. Illinois, Indiana, Nebraska, Minnesota and Texas seem to want tariff reduction in farmers' interest.

"For the present," comments the Journal on its straw-vote "there is no conclusion to be drawn but that farmers are opposed to both McNary-Haugenism and tariff reduction as means of changing their economic position by law. The active politicians, and even more professional 'farm leaders,' who are harping on these two themes, may well stop, look and listen." The publication points out that it deliberately refrained from "the familiar and unreliable" method of taking its straw-vote by mail. It resorted instead to the house-to-house system of personal interviews by its own representatives on rural free delivery routes throughout the country. Several hundred men were engaged in the work. The poll is still in progress. But the editors of the Farm Journal, which has the largest clientele of any agricultural organ in the United States, seem convinced that the results already indicated will not be substantially altered by later figures.

CAPPER TELLS PROSPECTS
Meantime, there is every sign that the eternal issue of "farm relief" will again dominate the political situation at Washington. Action of the 12-state corn and cotton group and the plan of the national grange for an "export duty" make that certain. So important a farm leader in congress as Senator Arthur Capper, Republican, of Kansas, has just issued an autographed statement which is a portent of coming developments. Mr. Capper says:

"The president is not as strong in the agricultural west as he might be. Still there is no great ill-feeling against him. The west has always been with him in his crusade for economy. Many farmers think the president has not done for the farming industry what he might well do and what so urgently needs doing and will have to be done. But the November elections in the middle-west or southwest can hardly be construed as a protest against the administration. The defeats in Missouri and Oklahoma were due to local causes; in Missouri, to the liquor question; in Oklahoma, to factional differences among Republicans. "And yet the plain fact is that the salvation of the Coolidge administration and its best hope depend absolutely on the agricultural west; on the working out of a 'farm relief' program which shall be acceptable to this large group of producing states. "The condition of the farmers is not improving. For the last three months all reports of the department of agriculture have shown the buying power of the farmer's dollar to be less than a year ago, and have shown farm prices on the decline. "The farm problem exists. It is tremendously real. And it is a national problem; for American prosperity cannot be maintained without a well-to-do farming industry. Something has been done toward relieving it, but the situation of the industry is more acute than ever. "This is the problem of the Coolidge administration. If the administration can meet the emergency the country will rise and call it blessed. But this will be the test."

Mr. L. S. Farquhar has sold his home on West Xenia St., to Wilfred Weimer. It includes sixteen acres in the rear, good out-buildings, many fruit trees, etc. Mr. Farquhar and family came to Jamestown from Cincinnati ten years ago, when he bought the dry goods business from the late G. R. Bargdill, and later acquired the room from the owner, Rufus Syfers, Jr., of Indianapolis, Ind. He conducted a successful business until early in 1926, when he sold the goods and room to Max Kolhagen, of Lebanon, who with his family moved to Jamestown. Mr. and Mrs. Farquhar have made many warm friends and held them, who greatly regret their departure; both of whom have been good workers in the church and in everything beneficial for the community. Mr. Farquhar has served as a member of the board of education for two years, now being president of that body. Mr. Weimer lives on a farm just south of town on the Jamestown-Bowlersville Pike, and also is in the dairy business, which he will continue after moving to town. The funeral services have been deferred until next Saturday on account of one son, Clarence, being in Rome, Italy. GET RID OF YOUR FAT

Thousands of others have gotten rid of theirs by my simple and efficient method of fat reduction without starvation diet or burdensome exercise, often at a very rapid rate and WITHOUT PAYMENT until reduction has taken place.

I am a licensed practicing physician and have made a careful study of the physiological requirements of the human body. This has enabled me to select such ingredients and in such proportion as in my opinion will produce not only a loss of weight without harm and an improvement in health, but with it an alleviation of all of the troublesome symptoms which frequently accompany and often are a direct result of overweightness, such as shortness of breath on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, etc., not to speak of the relief from the embarrassment of being too stout. Stout persons suffering from such diseases as Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Eczema, Asthma and high blood pressure are greatly relieved by a reduction of their superfluous fat.

My treatment will relieve that depressed, tired, sleepy feeling, giving you the renewed energy and vigor which come as a result of the loss of superfluous fat. If you are overweight do not postpone but sit down right now and send for my FREE TRIAL TREATMENT and my plan whereby I am to be PAID ONLY AFTER REDUCTION HAS TAKEN PLACE If you so desire.

PENNY THOUGHTS

Creative man has measured the span of the heavens, calculated the volume of the stars, arrested the lightning, subdued the seas and harnessed the elements to do his bidding.

How much further will he go? What other wonders will restless man accomplish?

About this, not even the wisest can make any but puny prophecies. But about the future we can be confident because man, as he moves along in the great darkness has material science for a light.

Pleasing The Eye And Palate Doesn't Necessitate By Thanksgiving Cost

By HILDA HUNT

It is just as important that the Thanksgiving dinner be a feast to the eye as it is that it should be a feast to the palate. Every holiday has its colors which lend themselves to table decoration and the autumn colors are outstanding, appropriate and effective at the present time.

The one thing which we think of in regards Thanksgiving is the turkey, and although economy often prevents the hostess from serving the genuine article, the paper mache variety may trim the table to good advantage.

As possible substitutes for turkey there are lamb and ham; the latter may be covered with rings of pineapple and surrounded with a variety of vegetables so that the service platter may be most attractive.

If an elaborate dinner is being planned there are many attractive centerpieces of crepe paper with corresponding place cards and favors. Often the place cards and favors serve to decorate the table sufficiently, doing away with the need for any center-piece save flowers.

The crepe paper Jack Horner piece which is illustrated above is fashioned from orange crepe paper particularly for the Thanksgiving season. Orange satin ribbons should run to each place and the newest accompanying favor is the pictured cauldron of orange crepe paper with bands of gold. The centerpiece, combined with the favors and the more simple of the place cards, is sufficient decoration for the table, although a flanking of the centerpiece with tall yellow candles in low crystal holders lends to the general balance and artistic design.

If a combination place card and favor is desired there is the little nut or candy container of paper which has a swinging card attached on which the name may be written. The large turkey, if used as a centerpiece, may be standing in an arrangement of autumn foliage with the smaller turkeys as favors.

The "brown-eyed Susan" candy container which is pictured at the top is new this year and is made up in brown and orange crepe paper. It may be used most effectively with a centerpiece of chrysanthemums or other seasonal flowers.

For the children's party, the place card which is illustrated as a contest between an Indian and a Pilgrim for the ownership of a turkey is very good. Balance in the items of the dinner and in the items of the decoration is the thing essential to a sense of completeness and perfection in your dinner, no matter how simple it may be.

Good taste, both in cooking and

TURKEYLESS THANKSGIVING DINNER MENU

There are persons who really do not like turkey-meat, because of its dryness, and there are others who omit turkey from the Thanksgiving menu to make the meal less expensive. The following turkeyless menu is recommended as one that will make the diners forget turkey. Of course turkey may be used with this menu:

Cranberry Cocktail
Baked Ham or Mutton Duck with Peanut Stuffing
Sweet Potatoes, Southern Style
Baked Squash
Shredded Cabbage, Apple and Raisin Salad
Pumpkin Pie With Cheese
Coffee
Candied Grapefruit Peel

in decoration is what aids the host, as in acquiring perfection in her dinner table appointments. Accompanying this article is a menu for a very moderate priced dinner

SCHOOL SAVINGS REACH HIGH MARK

Discounting the scattered withdrawals made, upon which no figures are available, Xenia public school savings deposits during the first nine weeks of school have reached the $741 mark, a survey by Superintendent H. C. Pendry discloses.

Since re-establishment of school banking at the opening of the school term weekly deposits have averaged about $85. While the total amount saved is less for the corresponding period than in 1925 the number of withdrawals are fewer.

Deposits have gradually increased each week since school began until the peak figure was reached in the seventh week, when $102 was banked. It is expected a gradual decline will be shown until after the Christmas season when deposits will mount once more.

No banking accounts are being opened to Central Senior High School students as the majority have adopted other means of laying aside funds.

THE MAIN CHANCE TODAY'S

The main chance is today's chance. The wrecks along life's highway testify to that simple truth. It is right and good to look ahead, but the man who sees farthest is the man who keeps his eyes on his job. It is splendid to have the urge to climb high. But the man who gets there is he who never takes his gaze from the finger holds in the sheer rock wall of his hard ascent.

Pitiful it is to see the broken bulk of a man lying at the base of life's mountain side and to know that he fell from high when success had turned his head.

Every day, in every field, we see these wrecks. And they point a moral that no man dare disregard. Life's work is, indeed, a climb and few and far between are the plateau lands upon which the breath-spent toiler may seek refreshment.

How many are the men, in private business or public concerns, who, flushed with the zeal for great attainment, despise the smaller tasks which lead them to the goal. How often a man who uses a public office to gain a higher honor, awakes to the rude actuality that he has been weighed and found wanting in his simple trust.

The key to great opportunity lies in proving true in the obscure, humble tasks of the present moment. The man who keeps ever in mind that his present job is his main job, that the present chance is the main chance, builds slowly, but surely, to broader trusts and greater achievements.

The builder knows that the higher he would rear his structure toward the heavens, the deeper and broader and stronger must be his foundation. The digging may be dull and tedious business, but without it there can be no lofty tower to challenge the eternal stars.

NEEDLES AND PINS

Winter is here; you need a warm coat. In the big cities, you huddle over steam pipes, shivering. Man alone of all nature's creatures, must look after himself. Other animals, as the seasons change, are generously provided with changes of clothing, to protect them from the frost, snow, ice, heat, wind; but man must make his own covering, or die miserably.

Without the tailor, no civilization, in our modern sense at least. Needles and pins are wonderful things.

Man, by nature soft and weak, is the most helpless of all other animals on this earth. The child sits up at the sixth month, creeps by the tenth month, walks by the fifteenth but has to be watched and tended by its parents for many years. If left unprotected with clothing or food, the hardest child in America could not survive one cold winter's night. What applies to the child is also true of the grown man and woman.

Without needle and thread, our race would immediately have to migrate to the jungles in tropical Asia, our ancestral home, otherwise we would die of cold and exposure.

As long as our primitive ancestors were content to remain in their Garden of Eden, all was well, but the urge to travel afar, to see the world, brought trouble, and that trouble is with us still.

At first, man did not dare to range very far, but kept close to the rivers. He was a fisherman long before he was a hunter, or a keeper of flocks and herds.

It was then too late to return to the Valley of Eden, and man, thanks to tailors, needle and thread no longer had fear of perishing from frost or snow, heat or furious sandstorms.

Imitating freely according to his needs the clothing of the lion, the fish, the eagle, the bee, the ant, the butterfly, the goat, the silkworm, robbing each, man found it possible to live at the remotest regions of this globe, and be at home everywhere. Today, in heavy furs in the Arctic, he makes a precarious livelihood spearing fish, works in the coal mines of Pennsylvania, fires the furnaces in the ship, accommodates his life, through his clothing, to the experiences of a sewer-rat in Chicago, a gold-hunter in Peru, or a farmer in Kansas.

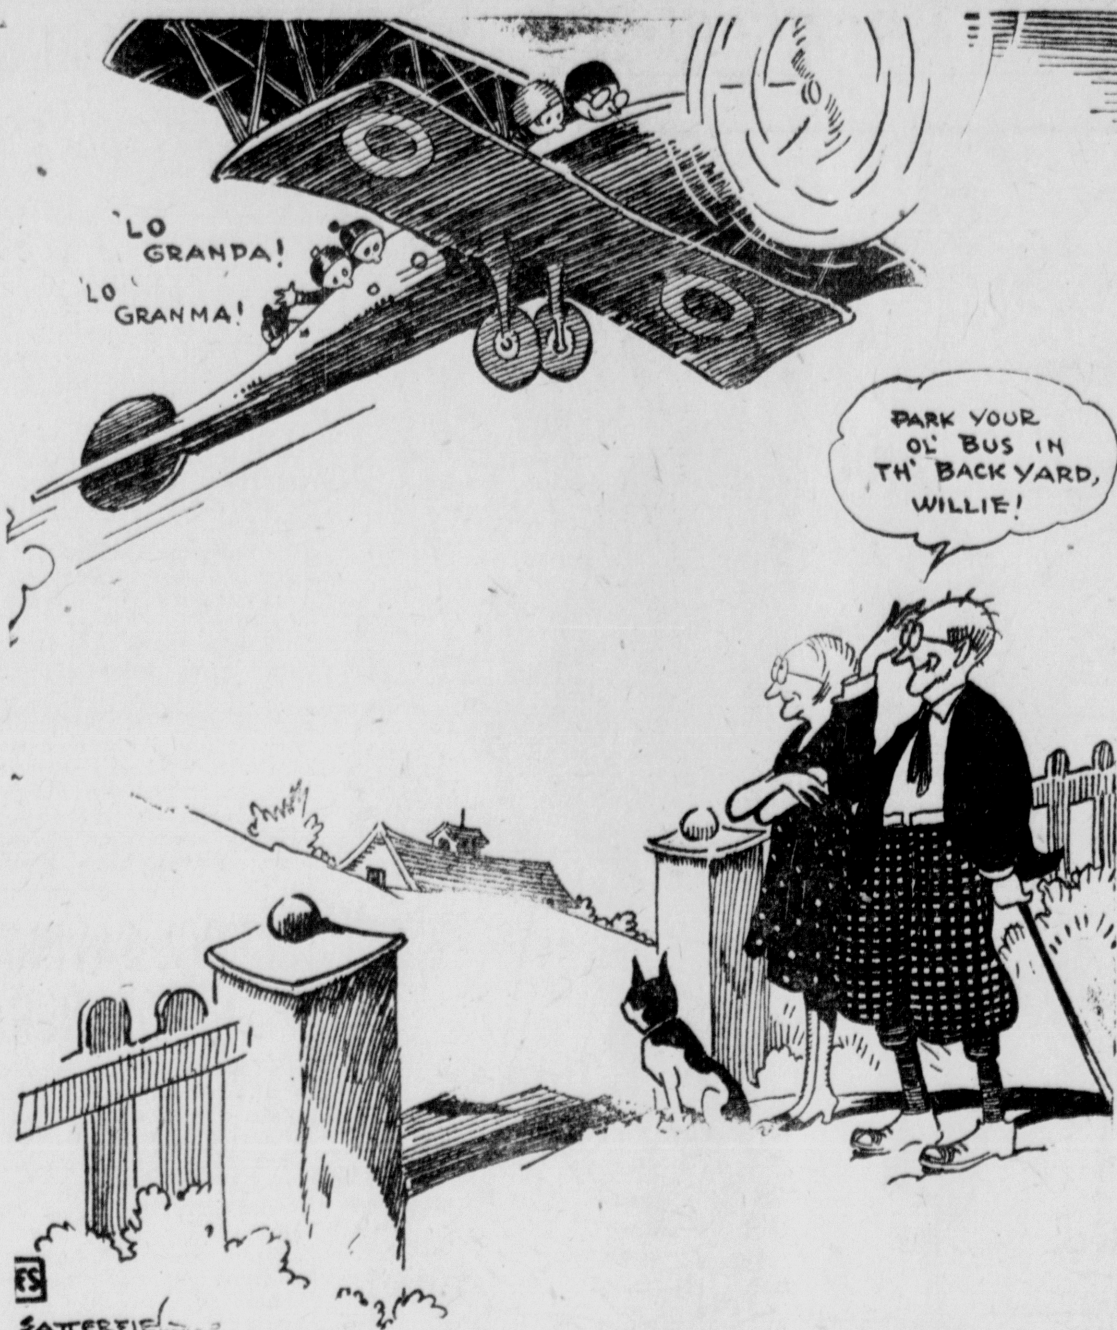

And on account of needles and pins.

How to Achieve Beauty

FIVE AGES OF BEAUTY
The Debutante Skin
In speaking of the debutante skin, I mean the young skin that does not need the corrective measures of the more active preparations. The preventive measures are sufficient. In other words, the treatment need only be of the simplest kind.
I have spoken of acne, which is the chief enemy of the young complexion. With that disposed of, we have today only the healthy normal skin to consider which can be as simple as I have stated above, still it is essential that it is not neglected. During the twenties you are laying the foundation for the quality of skin you will possess when you enter the thirties.
The debutante skin can also afford a more brilliant style of make-up than any natural effect if powder, rouge and lipstick are properly applied.
My next subject will be "The Cleansing should be a well-Young Matron's Skin."

There are only three things necessary for this type of skin. Fundamentally speaking, they are what I call the three steps to beauty, and are as follows: The first step is to cleanse and nourish the skin; the second step is to awaken the skin's activity, and the third step is to tone and brace the tissues.
Specialists.

KELLYGRAMS BY FRED C KELLY

DO WE REALLY LIKE TO BE FOOLED?

Houdini's recent death, in consequence of a blow in the abdomen by a smart-aleck whom he had invited to the stage, brings to mind the question whether people go to magic entertainments because they like to be fooled or because they hope they will be clever enough to see through most of the tricks.

I have wondered about this for a long time because I have dabbled a little at magic since childhood. My impression is that it takes a clever performer to put his audience into such good humor that they will enjoy the show even though they are fooled. Despite my fondness for sleight-of-hand stuff I have never outgrown a natural clumsiness in doing such tricks and people usually detect my secrets right off. At such times, the little group of friends who comprise my audience seem much happier than on the rare occasions when I do succeed in fooling them.

While the man who hit Houdini, as a test for the strength of his stomach muscles, of course didn't intend to bring on the magician's death, yet my guess is that he hit him harder than he realized because he was unconsciously indignant over the way he had already been baffled by Houdini's tricks.

I recall a woman who volunteered explanations of a simple bit of sleight-of-hand, and on being shown that she was wrong, exclaimed: "Well, you can't fool me. There's some kind of a trick to it!"

It's natural that people should be secretly annoyed when they're fooled and happy when they have outsmarted the performer. No body cares to pay money to be made to feel inferior. But what reconciles the audience to being mystified at a magician's show is probably the fact that is clever enough to give them opportunity to laugh at somebody else. He frequently cracks jokes at the expense of individuals. And he is almost sure to ask a few members of the audience to step to the stage.

In what follows, though this committee has the advantage of being close to the performer, they are nevertheless completely dumbfounded. The rest of the audience can then sit back and laugh at them.

With Houdini gone, few magicians are left clever enough to give a whole evening's entertainment and at the same time prevent an audience from becoming half-mad at him for outwitting them. If they enjoy a magic show it is in spite of being fooled.

Many 1 Minds SIGNIFICANT SAYINGS OF THE DAY

"The small town's the place, at least to accumulate a fortune. * * Men in the cities have too much amusement at their disposal to concentrate upon making money; in a small town their hours are not as crowded."—William T. Vandever, multimillionaire, of Taylorsville, Ill.

"It is easy for open-mindedness to degenerate. Open-mindedness about whether there is a God or not; open-mindedness about whether democracy or Bolshevism is the better form of government; open-mindedness as to whether laboring men have a right to organize or not; whether war should be abolished or not; whether monogamy or free love is to be preferred. * * There is nothing so futile as a man who lives through a long lifetime and never makes up his mind."—Harry Emerson Fosdick, famed preacher.

"Druggists can safely depend on winning their bread and butter by selling cosmetics to America's girls."—P. A. Hayes, vice president of National Wholesale Druggists' association.

"Singing has kept me young. It has filled me with vigor and been life for me."—Herman Kaufman, oldest member of the oldest singing society in New York state, who has been singing sixty years.

MAKING MODERN MENUS

A nice variation for the main dish of a small home luncheon is the asparagus loaf. Fortunately the ingredients required are almost always kept on hand by the best housekeepers and consequently this is one of those dishes which may be gotten up on short notice.

ASPARAGUS LOAF

Put enough nut meats to fill a cup through the food chopper, slightly moisten a portion of a stale loaf of bread and with a fork remove the crumbs, mixing the two ingredients together. Then add one-half teaspoon of salt, a pinch of white pepper, one cupful of shredded asparagus tips, two tablespoons of melted butter, and sufficient cream to moisten. Form into a compact loaf, and after laying in a buttered baking dish bake for fifty minutes in a moderate oven. Baste occasionally with butter, serve warm with cream sauce or cold with mayonnaise.

A change from the regulation creamed codfish is codfish in tomato sauce which is recommended for those who do not care for things which are creamed.

CODFISH IN TOMATO SAUCE

Cover one pound of salt codfish with boiling water, cook until tender, drain and separate into pieces. Combine one quart of stewed tomatoes, two medium sized onions, sliced fine and browned, two whole cloves and celery salt. Cook ten minutes and strain. Melt two tablespoons of butter, add two tablespoons of flour, stirring constantly. Cook until it bubbles, add tomatoes, cook until smooth, add one-half teaspoon of salt and one-fourth teaspoon of pepper. Add codfish and serve on hot toast.

Child and Chick Pals

Gloria Robinson, 2, Rochester, N. Y., doesn't care for dollies, because she has a chicken that follows her like Mary's lamb. They've "grown up" together and are inseparable pals. Gloria wheels the chicken about in a doll cart, you see.

HUMAN NATURE On the half shell

USELESS INFORMATION

Some day the identity of the fiend in human form who perpetrated the first questionnaire is going to be disclosed. When his name becomes known in will immediately be chalked up in red on the walls of the Hall of Infamy a foot or two above that of the inventor of the derby hat, the man who first sold a tooth brush with loose bristles, the chap who served the initial dish of mashed potatoes with lumps in them and the varlet who wished the paper napkin on the human race.

If the stage manager of the Spanish Inquisition had known about the questionnaire he would have laughed a merry, rippling laugh, tossed the rack and thumb screw out into the back yard and produced a de luxe show.

There's a certain type of mind that refined torture, of the questionnaire sort, just naturally appeals to.

The editor of a certain New York newspaper, interviewing applicants for reportorial jobs on his sheet, coaxes them into a rehearsal of their talents and book "lamin," and when they think the job is clinched he drags from his drawer a 25-word questionnaire and asks them to fill it out.

The questionnaire comprises simple little queries. Who is Pilsudski? Is there an I or a Y on the end of it? What's his first name? Give the Peggy Joyce's second husband's maiden name? Which way do the pite of America's girls, "P. A. Hayes, vice president of National Wholesale Druggists' association."

Does Sherwood Anderson

get paid for his stuff and if so, why?—and a lot of foolish questions on that order.

Despite old Tom Edison's efforts to keep the questionnaire in full bloom, it's been moulting lately and taking on a melancholy droop. All signs pointed to its early demise and general joy prevailed.

And now along comes a special writer in a Sunday newspaper, using the questionnaire a job in the arm and gradually coaxing it back to its old time vigor.

Gregory Hartwick is the lad's name and his questionnaire comprises one single, lonesome piebald query:

Name the Twelve Apostles. Gregory says that in a somewhat extended investigation he has not yet met anyone who could name the twelve. Only three persons succeeded in hitting six of the first trial.

"Nine out of ten," says the Worthington Brother, "start glibly by citing the four evangelists, which gave me the bulge right there."

Peter, it seems, is almost invariably remembered, but few name Judas. Paul is almost invariably lugged in. It is on Paul as on Mark and Luke that the questionnaire depends for its success.

A questionnaire is never a success if it can be readily answered by the average, normal, intelligent human being.

It's a nice thing, of course, to know the names of the Twelve Apostles; but in an age that at temples to maintain a society of pagan principles, while individuals within that society live or Christian principles, it's more profitable to be able to name the members of board of directors of the First National Bank in the old home town.

Little Old New York

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright 1926 NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—A century and a quarter ago the Capital of the Commonwealth of New York was a much simpler city than it is today, but even then, as now, it had its adverse critics.

Back in 1801 an unidentified visitor from Philadelphia took a jaunt around New York and upon reaching his inn at nightfall, sat down and to a friend back in Quaker Town penned a jaundiced description of the old burg.

"The cost of living is too high," he wrote. "The people are not so sociable enough. Dutch taste is in evidence. There are no genteel taverns as in Philadelphia, and the backyards are so small."

The markets were rotten and so far as "excursions on land" were concerned, the least said the better.

His letter, buried in a volume of the "Manuals of the Corporation of the City of New York," contains the following tag line:

"New York is a fine city to visit; but I would not live in it for anything."

It's too bad the writer's name was not preserved along with his funny old screed. As the author of that one line, alone, he most certainly would have achieved the Hall of Fame.

Back in that distant day a man named Bill Dunlap ran a playhouse he called The Theater. Bill was a good American, jealous of the stage and its traditions.

On the evening of November 16, 1801, The Theater opened its doors for the season announcing the event in the public prints, in part, as follows:

"The public is respectfully requested the Theater will open for the coming season this evening with a celebrated comedy, called LOVER'S VOWS. To which will be added, as Farce called FORTUNE'S FOLIC.

"The doors will be open at half past five, and the curtain will rise at half after six o'clock.

"Box, one dollar. Pit, three fourths. Gallery, one-half dollar. "It is earnestly requested, that no person will carry a lighted Segar into any part of The Theater, or attempt to renew the dangerous practice of smoking either in the lobbies or in the presence of the audience.

"The hitherto unavailing requests affixed to the playbills, that this practice may be omitted, furnish a constant source of ridicule to European travelers and are liberally adduced in their publications as a proof of the limited progress of civilization in our country."

Then follow some requests from Bill, to his prospective patrons prompted by considerations of morality and decency. His last paragraph follows:

"He requests also the co-operation of the public in abolishing the custom of giving away or disposing of checks at the door of The Theater."

"It tends to encourage a crowd of idle boys and other disorderly persons about the avenues of The Theater, to the great annoyance of the audience by their clamorous importunity—and to the corruption of their own morals, by inducing them to loiter away whole evenings at the doors.

"Very improper company has also, sometimes, been admitted. A person who quits the house before the entertainment is concluded does so at risk of his return being prevented, unless he can identify himself to the doorman."

May the pink cloud in which old Bill Dunlap is drifting for all eternity, never pass over Forty-fourth street and Broadway, where William may get a squirt at what is going on in the streets down below these nights.

He'd topple off his celestial perch sure as shootin'.

A Wrap to Shine in the Night is Trimmed With Wide Bands of Bead Embroidery. The debutante will appreciate the suave lines of this luxurious evening wrap, its gleaming fabric and luxurious fur collar. Her more discriminating elder sister also finds it desirable on account of its daring use of sparkling trimming in connection with shining metal cloth—a luxurious combination in high favor this season. I have used very supple silver.

lame for this wrap on account of its sparkle and youthful appearance. And to further accent the note of elegance the wide collar which reaches to the waist is of fluffy white fox.

These features alone would insure distinction. But in addition, there is an engaging trimming consisting of pale pink and blue beads and spangles, making a decorative flower design. Wide bands of this ornament trim the sleeves and lower portion of the skirt section.

Evening wraps this season are notable for their use of brilliant trimming in combination with lame or metal brocade, request by the decoration consists of velvet applique, embroidered in tinsel thread and ornamented with gleaming beads.

Five Home Games On Central 1927 Grid Schedule

WITHROW HIGH WILL PLAY HERE; RETURN PIQUA TO SCHEDULE

Stiff Opposition To Greet Local Team Next Season

Announcement of the list of games arranged for Central High School's football eleven in 1927 indicates two deviations from the schedule played this fall.

Eight games have been tentatively arranged, according to Coach Victor Kolb. On the customary eight-game schedule there are five attractive home games and three on foreign grids.

Chief among the changes is the re-appearance of Piqua on next year's chart. Urbana will also be played providing the school does not bring about another misunderstanding whereby two games are scheduled for the same date, an occurrence which disrupted one Central basketball schedule and the football schedule this fall.

Games booked for next season are considered the strongest in history as close inspection fails to detect anything that may be termed a "set up."

Central opens before a home crowd September 30 with Washington C. H. and will wind up as usual with the probable and customary unfavorable weather conditions, with Wilmington appearing here November 18.

Withrow High, of Cincinnati, will also come to Xenia for a return game under a two-year home-and-home contract. These three games added to home games with Greenville and Springfield will provide Xenia fans with the chance to witness some attractive contests.

Dates for the eight games arranged and schools to be played, as announced by Coach Kolb, are as follows:

September 30.—Washington C. H. here.
October 7.—Greenville here.
October 14.—Piqua away.
October 21.—Urbana away.
October 28.—Withrow (Cincinnati) here.
November 4.—Springfield here.
November 12.—Troy here.
November 18.—Wilmington here.

Simple, but Oh My!
How Vecto does heat!

You'll find the great secret of VECTO'S operating principle under its handsome porcelain enamel jacket. The air is "rubbed" against a mass of ribs or fins; and as it expands and rises it is thus made to carry off every particle of heat, "faster than bread sops up gravy."

Ordinary heaters of same size must be driven to 750 degrees of red-hot heat to equal the volume of low, gentle warmth poured out by the VECTO. It's lock-warm Air Heater at $97 (freight extra) beats heating to those not prepared to invest in Ideal ARCOLA Hot Water Radiator Heating. Easy payments. Write to Dept. R for catalog free.

safe door seals in all ash-dust and coal-gases; ideally clean. The Ideal VECTO Warm Air Heater at $97 (freight extra) beats heating to those not prepared to invest in Ideal ARCOLA Hot Water Radiator Heating. Easy payments. Write to Dept. R for catalog free.

FUN FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

Just AMONG US GIRLS

by Kathryn Kenney

"MAKE 'EM TRAVEL"

A lot of people who travel abroad third class have a first class time. There is so much travel to Europe that there's no room in the Atlantic for fish, they're lying flat in the bottom. It's got so that all the poor fish are on land anyway. But speaking about eats, the gang plank is the last board that a great many care anything about. It's a good idea to see America first because you can't see anything after Paris, anyway. The leisure class in this country where settling was the only thing you could do. Now when you go to California you know that the gold rush is still on even if your coat is torn off. When anyone went to Europe in the days of red carpets on the porch steps it was a great event. On return the lucky couple gave lectures on Paris with illustrated slides, although the best slides in Paris have never been illustrated. Its only lately that much has been made of the fact that most of the

PARIS BABY GETS HER CERTIFIED CHECK

Doesn't consist of men who have retired but of their children who never get up! They may get a kick from father, but they get a kick out of life as well. If mother complains about their late hours at home they take the first steamer for Paris and father doesn't dare "dock" them. They look at life through portholes and binoculars. When they get across they do their sightseeing through wine glasses. The great American public is shining up its French and its diamonds for the winter travel. Traveling used to be a thing which only a few went in for, now there aren't enough drawing rooms to go around. The idea of a big winter used to be taking your lunch and settling in a little town in Florida. Paris babies have been brought up on certified checks! It's getting to be a kind of disgrace to spend the winter in a place where your bills won't have to be forwarded. People have gone mad on traveling, and the first three times across the ocean it's the hardest to get back. A lot of Americans are discovering that the time to have your fling is before you get lumbago. The more you travel the happier you are to get home, provided some one else hasn't got it in your absence! Among the things that they bring back, their new ideas are the only ones they can get through the customs. The winter travel is on, the elastic is off the checkbook, it looks like a hardboiled winter.

The Theatre

"Hollywood is a gorgeous preposterous. It can't exist and yet here it is. Everyone here is purely objective. They don't believe anything because somebody says it's true. They don't take any textbook's word for a darn thing. They want to find out about everything for themselves. It's amazing, magnificent. They're so alive." This is Jack Barrymore's opinion of the "movie city" which he has grown to love after declaring his one love was for the stage.

"People in Hollywood live in a different world. They live a hundred per cent more fully than other people I've ever met. I've been subjective all my life. At last, in Hollywood, I've become objective."

"The people here are all lovely, irresistible, because they've got courage," Barrymore declares. "They live. They take the good and the bad with a grin. They've created a philosophy of today. 'Try anything once' and 'They can't kill you if you've got a sense of humor.' That's Hollywood. I've lived about a bit, met a few people, but the most interesting people in the world are in Hollywood."

At last the country doctor, heretofore an unsung hero, is to be glorified upon the screen. A recent announcement from the DeMille studio told of plans for "The Country Doctor" in which Joseph Schildkraut will play the title role. If ever America boasted unsung heroes, surely the country doctor stands high in the ranks of that company. Schildkraut is a veteran character actor. The pub-

"You know what I mean," Grumpy rapped out, "What's this I hear about you and Jack running around together?"

(TO BE CONTINUED)

What had Grumpy heard about Jack and Honey Lou? And who told it to him? Read the answer in tomorrow's chapter of HONEY LOU.

white-haired, broad-shouldered, red-faced, rotund Bob McCarter.

For many a long year New Jersey has taken Bob McCarter for granted. In some hazy manner, difficult to define, he has been associated in the public mind with wealth and power that wealth can wield. If his ability as a lawyer and his reputation were to meet in head-on collision, they wouldn't recognize each other. Every community has its legal Bob McCarter.

The contrast between the ponderous pomposity of the well-fed leading counsel for the defense, and Alexander Simpson, who conducts the state's case, is highly amusing. Simpson is not five feet tall. He has that wiry alertness that invariably accompanies a high-power brain. Simpson operates on a hair trigger. McCarter blunders along on a time fuse.

Although McCarter is independently wealthy there's a streak of the plebeian in his soul. He is a man who is just naturally awed by money. Simpson, on the other hand, is one of those brilliant, unfettered spirits, willing to bestow intelligent reverence where reverence has established its claim, but equally capable of spitting at the stars if the occasion warrants.

The disparity in the gait of the two men was sharply emphasized during McCarter's cross-examination of poor Jim Mills, school janitor and husband of the murdered choir singer.

McCarter invariably refers to Mrs. Hall's mentally diluted brother as "Mr. William Stevens," but he patronizingly addressed Mills, during his session on the stand, as "Jimmy."

Mills hasn't a nickel to his name, therefore, why should General McCarter address him as "Mr. Mills?"

On re-direct examination of Mills, Senator Simpson interrupted himself in the middle of a question.

"By the way," he said. "I noticed that during General McCarter's cross-examination he addressed you as 'Jimmy.' Do you dine often with the general?"

"No sir," replied the simple Mills, much perplexed.

"But you know him intimately I suppose?"

"No, sir, I don't," said the school janitor, more mystified than ever.

"Oh, I thought you did," grinned Simpson, resuming his examination.

And McCarter's face, suffused in color, resembled more than ever a Swiss sunset.

HONEY LOU by Beatrice Burton

CHAPTER XXI.

On Monday morning before seven o'clock the telephone bell peeped through the flat.

"It's Mr. Wallack for you," Mrs. Huntley called to Honey Lou, who was taking her key plunge in the chilly bathroom.

"Ask him to give you the message!" Honey Lou answered through teeth that chattered, "I'm in the t-t-tub!"

But in a minute her mother came back to the door of the bathroom.

"Dear, you'd better come. He won't give the message to me," she said. "He seems to be in quite a rage—at least he sounds that way."

So Honey Lou wrapped her flannel kimono around her damp body and ran to the telephone. Her feet were bare, and the little curls that bobbed around her ears were dark and wet. She was still shivering.

"Y-y-yes, Mr. Wallack. This is Honey Lou."

She could hear him grunt at the other end of the line.

"I want you to go down to my office before you come to my house this morning," he told her gruffly. "Get my mail from that French doll down there, and bring it to me here."

Grumpy always called Ann "that French doll," or "that female talking machine."

Ann had never looked more like an overdressed doll than she did on that Monday morning when Honey Lou walked into the office of the mills.

She had on a dress of black shadow lace with a belt of green ribbon.

Another band of the ribbon was tied around her bright red hair, and she wore seven or eight strings of imitations pearls with rhinestone clasps.

Her round green eyes seemed to become more round and green when she saw Honey Lou come up the iron stairs and walk across the floor to her.

"Well, for the love of Moses in the bullrushes! What are you doing here?" she wanted to know. She clapped her handkerchief to her mouth, and secretly spat her chewing gum into it.

"I came down for Mr. Wallack's mail," Honey Lou answered. "It's awfully nice to see you again, Ann. I've missed you this summer."

She smiled ravishingly—she liked Ann in spite of her immodest clothes, her chewing gum, and her "gimme" ways with men who were in love with her.

But there was no answering smile on Ann's highly rouged face. Instead her eyes hardened until they were like green stones, and a sneer curled her red lips.

"So that's it!" she said, "you're the doll-baby who beat me out of the only good job I ever had in my life—I wondered what had happened when the Old Man told me
